Over this past weekend, Boston College hosted a conference called “Pope Francis, Vatican II, and the Way Forward,” a gathering of Catholic bishops and theologians discussing Pope Francis’ recent call for an increased focus on synodality.

The conference was co-sponsored by Fordham University and Loyola University Chicago. The subject of the weekend, “Synodality,” means an increased focus on listening to all voices in the church, especially laity who previously were not necessarily at the table before. The Archdiocese of Boston submitted their report of focus groups and listening sessions in 2022.

“It’s a way of decentralizing decision-making,” said the Rev. Mark Massa SJ, head of the Boston College Boisi Center for Religion and American Life and conference organizer. The Synod on Synodality started in 2021 and will con-

HP street festival announced at BOT

Business district lighting concerns addressed

The Hyde Park Board of Trade (HPBOT) held its monthly dinner meeting at Las Delicias Colombianas Hyde Park (1231 River St.) last Tuesday, Feb. 28. Scott Smith was the main speaker, and he officially announced the Celebrate Hyde Park - Festival in The Street to about 15 attendees. Scheduled for June 24 from 7 p.m.-11 p.m., the event will be at the lower end of Fairmount Avenue to Logan Square, and will be closed to auto traffic.

Inspired by the HP150 street festival held in the summer of 2018 in the same location to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the community, Celebrate Hyde Park will feature live performances, food trucks, and other attractions involving local businesses.

Smith was one of the coordinators of HP150 – comprised of celebratory events building up to the street festival – and he noted that that culminating block party had been considered as something to continue “as a tradition for Hyde Park.” He added that the pandemic had brought a temporary halt to those plans,

Negative responses to accessory dwelling plan

Jamaica Plain has historically been on the cutting edge of housing; philanthropic housing (Woodbourne. 1912 - 1914), government financed housing (Heath Street. 1941) and compact dwelling units proposed at 3-5 Woodlawn in 2021.

The latest phase is accessory dwelling units (ADU) and the first one in Jamaica Plain is proposed at 294 South St., a two-family house next to American Legion Post 76. This was first brought up at the Feb 15 virtual Jamaica Plain Zoning Committee (JPZC) meeting chaired by Dave Baron.

“This is a new thing for the zoning committee,” he said. “This is part of the 2.0 pilot program accessory dwelling units, converting garages to housing.”

Baron later explained that the 1.0 pilot program affects attics and basements as living spaces and has no zoning requirement; ADU 2.0 will require zoning review. 294R South St. has 11 zoning violations. The garage at 294R’s plan was filed with ISD on April 5, 2022.

PLL fundraising for field repairs Parade returning in full force

For the last three years, the Parkway Little League (PLL) has been reigning in its annual parade to start the season because of concerns surrounding COVID-19. However, PLL Board Member Dennis Roache said this year they're looking to get things back to the original springtime event in all its glory.

"Last year we had to tone it down a bit; we didn't have outsiders and the kids just went down the street," he said. "The Parkway Girls Softball will be there, we'll have outsiders, we're looking into getting back the bands that marched with us in the past, the classic cars, and the Boston Fire Department also had an engine with us and so this is like the 'We're Finally Back' moment after three years of being in the weeds, getting through the seasons and keeping it as normal as possible, if that makes any sense."

PLL President Bill Sittig said they are also fundraising for the Bunker Field off of Baker Street in West Roxbury.

"We're going to use the Parade and Opening Day as kind of a second launch of our fundraising efforts," he said.

The pair said the original 1950s-field really needs a lot of work. Roache said the outfield, for one thing, is at least a few feet off level with the infield diamond and dugouts flooding regularly. He said they have to cancel games for most rain

425 LaGrange hosting open house on March 9

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The development at 425 LaGrange St. in West Roxbury is opening its doors to the community on March 9 from 5 to 7 p.m. Representative Kris MacDonald said they want to give residents a chance to see what's been going on there since the project was first proposed more than eight years ago.

The original building on the site, an Armstrong Pharmaceuticals Plant, was left empty for years after being vacated. The first proposed plan to build 62 rental units was vociferously objected to by neighbors and others. During this developmental planning process, the old building actually caught fire in a five-alarm blaze in 2014. Now, MacDonald said the 40-unit condominium building is finally ready for business.

"It's a broker's open house, previewing the building, really just getting some neighbors through so they can see what they've been waiting to see for so long," he said. They will have food by Antonio Bacaro's from Hyde Park.

The site sits at the intersection of LaGrange and Centre Street in a very central location with easy access to Billings Field, the Parkway YMCA and the Needham Line of the MBTA Commuter Rail.

MacDonald said the 40 potential new families in the neighborhood will support the local shops and restaurants located along Centre Street.

"And a fair amount of our interest so far has been from people who want to stay in the neighborhood and don't want to maintain a big house anymore," he said. "It's nice because it's taking away that maintenance component for people and wrapping it into a condo fee that's fairly reasonable."

MacDonald said he's excited to see what people think of the building given the original Armstrong building was somewhat of an eyesore.

"It's finally gone!" he said. "That neighborhood eyesore is finally gone. And this is a well constructed building using really good materials. It looks and fits well in the neighborhood considering what was there before, and they did a really good clude in 2024.

The idea for having a large conference of clerical higher ups and academics to discuss this idea emerged in the summer of 2021, with the first conference being held in 2022 at Loyola Chicago.

"The idea is to provide a safe space where bishops and theologians can talk about the church," said Massa.

"It's a direct response to Pope Francis' initiative of the synod for synods," said Zac Karanovich, another organizer from the Boisi Center. "We have the blessing of Cardinal O'Malley," he said, adding that the hope is conferences and discussions about this topic "paves the way for ongoing dialogue." O'Malley celebrated a mass for the initiation of the synodal way in 2021.

On March 4, the conference had three speakers: Dr. Hosffman Ospino, professor at the Boston College School of Theology and Ministry, Dr. Susan Reynolds, professor at the Candler School of Theology at Emory University, and Bishop Daniel Flores of Brownsville, Texas. Each spoke about synodality and ways to implement it from their area of expertise.

Ospino said that "reform is necessary" and that "diversity and difference should not be perceived as threats to ecclesial unity." He is a professor of religious education, and spoke of the particular need for adult catechesis and of a need for the laity to become more familiar with the documents of the Second Vatican Council. This is the council that led to significant changes in the Catholic Church starting in the 1960s, such as the change from the mass conducted in Latin to being in the vernacular. Ospino sees this synodal process as a way of reinvigorating the council and its documents.

Reynolds, who wrote a book about parishes in Roxbury, spoke about the challenges of synodality from her perspective as an ethnographer. She said, "good research requires a clear eyed understanding of power," something she thinks has been lacking in the church. She also spoke about the need for a "much more robust network of parishes", not just a parish seeing itself as entity unto itself connected only to its bishop.

"We're not used to being in union with other parishes," she added, saying this is part of why parishes have struggled so much when it becomes necessary for them to share priests or other resources with a nearby parish.

Flores, whose diocese is in the Rio Grande Valley, located on the border with Mexico, talked about his challenges on the ground with his primarily low income, immigrant parishioners. He said church is important because it's "one of the few multi-generational events that happen anymore", and added that "if you want young people to stay in the church, give them something to do, because participation is belonging."

He also said that "the 15-year-old immigrant, he doesn't trust the government, he doesn't trust the border patrol, he doesn't trust the cops...but he does trust the church," but that "the undocumented are not going to come to a mixed group" and talk about being undocumented. While this is of particular concern in Brownsville, he pointed out that "they're in every diocese in the country, because everyone has a cousin in Chicago." Massachusetts has about 200,000 undocumented immigrants.

He spoke of a more general issue with the poor and vulnerable feeling unwelcome in the church. One of the respondents to the Archdiocese of Boston's listening sessions in 2022 expressed a similar sentiment:

"We continue to have second class Catholics. Wealthy parishes have "more seats at the table" than do poor parishes."

City residency

My Kind of Town/ Joe Galeota

A recent newspaper story headlined that the Mayor was granting even more waivers than her predecessors to fill essential jobs. This means that a prospective city employee does not have to live in Boston.

Hmmm. It's really too bad that so many city workers are and will be allowed to live outside the city. My reasoning is that if the community is good enough to work for (and draw a hefty salary from), it's good enough to live in, even for hard-to-fill positions such as right-handed arborists who are afraid of heights.

Demanding city residence will have wonderful effects (even though the first one here is a two-sided sword): more professionals living in the city will elevate the value of two- and one-family homes; BPS will have higher test scores; local businesses will have a better bottom line; and the presence of health and safety neighbors means that the quality of life should increase should there be accidents.

Her request for 357 positions included 13 job titles, which are supposed to be hard to fill. Some of these were granted to new police officers who transferred from other agencies. Usually new police officers as well as new firefighters have to remain in the city for their first 10 years, but the downside is that so many move out, meaning that only 70 percent of fire and police live in Boston.

Regrettably, state laws ban communities from requiring teachers to live in the districts in which they teach. This has a particularly deleterious effect on Boston, as a whopping 42% of all BPS personnel live outside the city.

All in all, only 78% of the (non-BPS) municipal work force lives in Boston.

To paraphrase the late Louis Armstrong, "what a wonderful city it would be" if city residency were demanded of more interlopers.

but that when conversations had resumed in earnest, a meeting had been held a month earlier, and the plan was solidified.

Smith went into the motivations for Celebrate Hyde Park.

"Having a big party is a pretty good reason to start... but I want to make sure that this event is doing something more," he said.

He went into the values determined for HP150 by its organizers – community pride; building a brand and perception for Hyde Park and showcasing the neighborhood while raising its profile; increasing volunteerism; promoting diversity; building the vibrancy of the community; and creating lifelong memories – as goals for this street festival, as well.

Acknowledging that the organizers were already "running catch-up" regarding Celebrate Hyde Park – which is less than four months away – Smith encouraged those in attendance to start spreading the word, while adding that a social media campaign was in the works.

During the discussion, HPBOT President Scott Batey brought up the HP150 planning experience and a way to improve it by actively involving more businesses.

"We want to make sure that they're part of this and that they're benefiting from this."

Suggesting increased bilingual outreach, he added that "we're trying to figure out... the best way of bringing as much of the community into this as possible."

Building on that, Batey spoke to Miguel Angel Gallego, the owner of Las Delicias Colombianas, who was participating from behind the bar on the quiet Tuesday night.

"By then, you're going to have an entertainment license. Hopefully. And you're going to have a band, or something that day, and people are going to hear the music coming out of here. And, hopefully, you're going to have some sort of promotional thing that day to get people to come in and try your food," Batey said of his hopes for the restaurant, which is about a block and a half from Logan Square. "If we know that in advance, and we know that this is what Las Delicias is doing on that day, and you have a band and whatever, then we should be encouraging people to stroll down and check it out."

Gallego asked about increased visibility. "I know Fairmount Ave. looks great. I love it during the night," he said of the pole-to-pole string lighting on that block. "Everybody's going that way... But after 7 [p.m.], we've got nothing." Alluding to the recent armed robbery at the nearby S.K. Convenience, he continued. "During the night, here and the [municipal] parking lot is really dark, so I don't know if we can work on lights."

Batey, having checked with the City, informed Gallego that it views pole-to-pole lighting as a hazard, but that State Representative Rob Consalvo (14th Suffolk) was inquiring about a City lighting program, which, in all likelihood, would not be ready by June 24.

"The darker it is down here, I'm going to have the same thing," Gallego worried aloud, which led Batey to recommend that concerned businesses contact Councilors Ricardo Arroyo and Ruthzee Louijeune, adding that the HPBOT and Main Streets would continue to push the issue.

The evening's other speaker was Hyde Park resident Moses DaSilva to tell the Board about his mortgage/business/start-up loan outfit, MD Silva Consulting (in partnership with Kevin Harrington of Shark Tank). His business also provides an all-in-one marketing service, and guidance for available business funding.

Finally, two Hyde Park businesses made recent appearances in the media:

Park 54 (81 Fairmount Ave.) was recently featured on The Phantom Gourmet and Roundhead Brewing (Westinghouse Plaza, Building 10) was featured on Chronicle.

Both short features can be viewed on the respective shows' websites.

ZBA approves 582 Cambridge in Allston

Jeff Sullivan

Despite some opposition from neighbors, the Boston Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) approved the 19-unit condo project at 582 Cambridge St. in Allston.

The project gained support from the Allston Civic Association (ACA) and the Brighton Allston Improvement Association after it switched its 22 rental units to 19 condominium units. According to development attorney Jeff Drago, of Drago & Toscano, they also worked with the community during the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) Article 80 review process and reduced the size and height of the project to come more into line with neighborhood desires.

Several residents voiced their opposition to the project, raising the fact that it could mean the loss of trees. Currently, the project sits on two parcels, one with a three-family house and another vacant lot with trees and shrubs. Residents at the meeting said they were concerned with the loss of trees and greenery and how that could affect the rest of the neighborhood's heat island.

"We actually agreed to keep the trees, and we think we can keep all of them," Drago said.

Drago also said they are looking to install street trees on the sidewalks of the site, which currently doesn't have any. There is space for 12 parking spaces, four floors, a roof deck, events, even well after any actual precipitation.

“The entire center field is sinking and the dugouts are pretty much from the original complex and the drains are not working,” he said. “They’ve been there for 60 years, and so it’s basically a tear down and rebuild. We want to have it there for the next 60 or 70 years. The drain system is just old, and the field floods as soon as it rains. It’s way past its useful life.”

Sittig said this was a relaunch, as they’ve been campaigning for a while now to get funding for the field’s repairs. He said they were originally approved for $350,000 to repair the fields in 2019 through that year’s funding round of the Community Preservation Act (CPA). But he added the timing was just a bit unlucky.

“As soon as we received the money, the pandemic hit,” Roache said. “Things changed. We still have the funds, but costs really started escalating, inflation sunk in and what was at the time a $450,000 project is now being billed as a $750,000 project.”

The pair said they have a GoFundMe to try to raise $300,000 from resident and former league members to get the field up to snuff.

“We’ve also developed a lot of footage on the history of the league. We’ve created this whole set of videos to get alumni excited about the league,” he said. “We’re seeking upwards of 1,000 donors, and our alumni who we’ve seen around the neighborhood seem very excited about it when we’ve talked to them.

Now we just need to get them to kick in and build this next field for the next generations of Parkway Little League.”

Roache said the league owns all three fields on the complex dating back to the 1950s. Right now they are working with other funding sources and over the last three years they’ve received about $100,000 in community mitigation funds from projects built in the neighborhood.

Sittig said the kids are really looking forward to the parade this year, maybe a little more than usual.

“I think a lot of the kids who have siblings who went through the program and know what opening day means to the community haven’t really gotten to experience that over the past three years and so I know there’s a lot of anticipation of getting this season kicked off,” he said. “We’ve had a pretty mild winter and I think it’s enabled kids to get outside and maybe get a head start on the season and I know folks are excited for baseball in the Parkway.”

 MacDonald said the building was designed to mimic the houses in the neighborhood. For instance, he said the roof looks like regular asphalt shingles, but is actually a vi-

 One of the issues brought up during the review process was that the construction could disturb the cemetery next to the site, but that did not happen.

REJ hosts discussion on art and democracy

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Racial Equity and Justice (REJ) Forum of Hyde Park hosted a discussion on art, democracy and the role of Black voices in the United States recently in a virtual format.

The group is a part of the West Fairmount Hill Neighborhood Association (WFHNA) and was led by organization chair Marcia Kimm Jackson. The night was moderated by At-Large City Councilor Ruthzee Louijeune and State Rep Brandy Fluker Oakley, and featured speakers Jose Masso III, Sanye and Danny Rivera.

Masso is a longtime community advocate in Hyde Park and is the DJ for ¡Con Salsa! On WBUR. Rivera is a singer and Sanye is a local community artist.

The focal point of the discussion was a recently released docuseries explaining and profiling The 1619 Project, and tells the history of the United States through the lens of Black Americans.

Kimm-Jackson started the questions asking how Black Americans should approach democracy in the United States and how they see it impacting them.

Masso said it's all about standing up for the ideals of the United States no matter how the country actually lives up to them. In fact, he said many of those disaffected in the United States know just how important democracy is and never take it for granted. He pointed to his father, who fought in World War II, and how he viewed democracy.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin (Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —V.C.

Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.

Accessory Dwelling

Dwelling Units) 2.0 Program,” said Baron.

The owner is Rosalba Solis, who was on the call and said she bought the house 35 years ago. She said she was a retired teacher and her husband retired from the Boston Housing Authority.

“I’m trying to keep up the house,” she said. “There’s not enough income renting the [one unit] in the house. The rent for two units means I can live in the garage.”

Solis said she’s had offers on the house –which is a five minute walk from Forest Hills terminal.

“A few years ago I had an offer from a developer to buy my house and tear it down for eight condominiums,” she said.

“I live in Mexico part of the year,” Solis said. “I’m calling from Mexico. The winters are too cold. It worries my back. Right now people are renting two units, rented to other people.”

Derick Thomas was introduced on the call as the design builder; he said he lives in Salem and has had experience with ADU’s.

“It’s not a new house; it’s not separate unit. It’s a full living space,” he said. “It’s in an existing two-car garage, 12 feet high, 20 by 20 [400 square feet]. It has a full kitchen, full bath, living and sleeping area and a separate entrance.”

“[Solis] is one of ten homeowners accepted by the city pilot program selected by the Housing Innovation Lab,” Thomas said.

Thomas put up a fact sheet on the screen share. The program is managed by the Housing Innovation Lab and the Department of Neighborhood Development. Chana Haouzi of DND is the project manager.

The pilot schedule began with a kickoff meeting on June 10, 2021 and went through four design workshops.

In addition to the scaled drawing site plan with dimensions, the owner was required to submit a “program list. What would you like to have in the living space? List function and approximate area” by June 21, 2021.

Thomas said Solis was the only submission “so far out of the 10 selected.”

Mike Chavitz is the architect. “I’ve done a lot of these 2.0 projects,” he said. “All utilities will be connected to the main house, hot water, heating, and condensers.

“This is a two family plus an accessory unit,” Chavitz said.

Solis held an abutters meeting two days earlier on Feb. 15.

“I had nine months training, Solis said. “It took seven months to get approval, Christmas 2022. It took a long time to get the [ISD] denial letter. Now we could talk to the neighbors. Now I can report to the community,” Solis said.

“A year ago I approached Bernie [Doherty, a neighbor],” she said. “I told Bernie I want to live there. I assured Bernie that I’m not going to rent it as a B&B to my garage. I need a space to move in.”

Doherty, who is also vice chair of the neighborhood council and an ex officio member of the zoning committee, seemed unsatisfied.

“This is a shotgun meeting,” he said. “This is precedent; turning garages into houses. Rosalba called me about seven months ago and asked me for a letter of support. This is a third unit.”

Baron seemed concerned about precedent too.

“I think we have a problem,” he said. “This is a conflict of interest,” pointing out that Doherty was also Chair of his neighborhood association.

“I will vote as an association member and as a member of this committee,” Doherty said. “It’s not a conflict.”

Baron said, “It’s deliberate.”

Committee member Nicholas Chaves agreed with Doherty. “This is a very quick process,” he said. “The plans are not specific.” Chavez wanted to see more specific plans before approval.

Zoning committee members Andrea Howley, Marie Turley and

Kevin Moloney wanted the project to go back to the neighbors. “Meet again,” Turley said, “and have a more supportive meeting.”

Chris Moe, who said he lived at 19 Asticou Rd., had concerns about a wall he said separated his property from Solis.

“I want to feel included in the process,” he said.

Committee member Omer Hecht seemed puzzled.

“I’m not sure what is going on here,” he said. “Nothing is being changed structurally.” “Every concern has been answered. Another meeting will have the same discussion. It simply empowers abutters, the arm bending power of the abutters,” Hecht said.

A motion to defer approval until the March 22 zoning committee meeting was made and passed with Baron adding, “I completely agree.”

outdoor raised landscaping and three affordable units at 100 percent area median income.

The ZBA approved the requested zoning code variances for the site, of which there were many. Those variances included insufficient rear and side yard setback, excessive height in stories (three allowed four proposed), excessive height in feet (above 35 feet), insufficient off-street loading, excessive floor area ration and insufficient lot area per unit.

Resident Laura Mayer said she was opposed to the building because the vacant lot contains trees and shrubs that constituted greenspace.

"We benefit massively from the huge amount of greenspace behind the house, including a massive maple tree that is over 100 years old," she said. "There are a number also of mature trees along the west side of the extension property that is in question at this point. It also has a huge number of mature shrubs."

Mayer also said she was concerned for the character of the neighborhood.

"In this very quiet part of Allston, this project would totally change the character of it, not just where my husband and I live but the whole neighborhood," she said. "There are just too many people in one building in a neighborhood where there are three-families."

Drago reiterated that they will be trying to save all the trees on the site, and pointed out that the vacant parcel is a taxable parcel and is not technically open space.

ACA President Tony D'Isidoro and BAIA President Anabel Gomes said both their respective organizations support the proposal, especially seeing as it helps to increase Allston's 10 percent home ownership rate

"There was initial opposition when it was introduced as a rental project and there were concerns expressed by direct abutters as well, but the proponents made what I think is a wise decision by switching to condos," D'Isidoro said. "It helped to minimize opposition, as did working with direct abutters to alleviate any concerns that they may have had, so we would like to go on record in support."

"We think more homeownership is very important and we would like to see design review to make sure the greenery outside is kept and also a bit of the character of the neighborhood is kept with the outside of the building," Gomes said.

ZBA member Jeanne Pinado asked Drago why the roof deck structures were so large in the plan. Architect William Lee said they had tried to get them as small as possible in the planning process.

"We have made every effort as we possibly could to reduce them," he said.

Drago added they also pulled the roof deck inward to keep it out of sight from the ground.

The ZBA voted to approve the development unanimously pending design review by the BPDA.

BPD announce drag racing arrests in Pkwy

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Police Department (BPD) announced recently the arrest of four individuals in connection with drag racing in the Parkway area after a search warrant at a self-storage area in Roslindale discovered drugs, guns, and vehicles.

The BPD arrested Angel Javier Mejia Lara, 26, of Roxbury, Wallis Baez Pimentel, 31, of Roxbury, Ramon Antonio Villar Peguero, 20, of Roxbury, and Melfi Octavio Rosa Hiraldo, 35, of Dorchester.

The BPD stated officers have been conducting a long-term investigation focused on groups involved in illegal drag racing, which has been a serial complaint at the Mount Hope Canterbury Neighborhood Association (MHC). The parking lot at the American Legion Plaza in East Roslindale has been a hot spot for late night parties, public drinking and drag racing.

The BPD reported executing a search warrant at the self storage garage at 44 Lochdale Rd. in Roslindale. The warrant was carried out by the District E-5 Drug Control Unit (West Roxbury/Roslindale), the District D-4 Drug Control Unit (South End) and members of the Auto Theft Unit.

The BPD reported seizing more than 36 grams of fentanyl, 37 vehicles like dirt bikes and mopeds and a multitude of firearms. Those firearms included but were not limited to a Glock 19, a Masterpiece Arms Subgun, an Archangel AR 15, a Rockland Island Revolver Model 206, a Glock 26, SCCY 9MM and a Umarex Pellet Gun. Officers also reported that they seized three extended magazines and a silencer.

Lara has been arrested and charged with five counts of unlawful possession of a firearm, three counts of unlawful possession of ammunition, unlawful possession of a large-capacity firearm, registering of bets, money laundering, two counts of trafficking of class A fentanyl, five counts of distribution of class A fentanyl, receiving stolen license plate, three counts of larceny of a motor vehicle, operating an illegal repair shop and conspiracy.

Pimentel was placed under arrest and charged with: registering of bets, use of telephone for gaming and betting purposes, and conspiracy.

Peguero was placed under arrest and charged with: Trafficking of Class A fentanyl, five counts of distribution of class A fentanyl, and drag racing.

Hiraldo was placed under arrest and charged with: Three counts of Distribution of Class A Fentanyl.

"I put that in context because he served in the Army in the 1940s and the 1950s. Think about that," he said.

Masso said the ideals that his father was fighting for were worth it, even if they weren't reflected in his homeland.

"But I say that because, for him, an Afro-Latino, a Puerto Rican American, the idea of fighting for democracy for a country that was colonizing his homeland, and make no bones about it, we are a colony of the United States, was conflicting," he said. "He understood that democracy was not for just one group of people and it was not defined for one group of people. He understood that those who fought hardest for democracy were those who were being victimized. He went through segregation, racism and all the things Black soldiers went through, yet he understood that that fight was worth it because at the end of the day he wanted to make sure his descendants would have people like Representative Oakley, Representative (Rob) Consalvo and other people at the table responding to an equal, just and inclusive society."

Rivera said it's important to recognize that while Black Americans have contributed to the democratic process in the United States, they have also been oppressed by it. Sanye agreed, pointing to a myriad of laws enacted in the United States designed specifically to prevent Black people and other minorities from voting. Rivera implored that people get involved in community outside the democratic process, as voting is not necessarily the only way to bring about long-lasting change.

"I believe in the power of the vote. John Lewis is one of my heroes and we all know how much he advocated for voting rights, but I am also interested in exploring other options to establishing community, democracy, relationship and reconciliation amongst community members," he said. "That can happen, believe it or not, without politics. I say that only because at the end of the day we're all human and we have an option and a choice to connect with one another on that basis and that's the work of liberation. To move beyond what hasn't worked for centuries and find ways of making this work."

Sanye said the importance of voting is reflected in the very efforts of some to disenfranchise others.

"We've seen voter suppression laws and threats to community, with the understanding of how powerful our voices are and how dangerous it became just to vote and participate in the system that would allow for the ideal of the system to continue and thrive," Sanye said.

The other topic discussed was of art and culture and how that fits into representative government. All three speakers are performers in one way or another, and Rivera said he wants to use his platform to say something important.

"It's always changing, but the way in which I go about doing it remains the same and for me, within every artists' work, it's important that there's some exploration of and engagement with democracy, as our voices as artists are the ones people hear the most," he said.

Sanye said he believes there is no separation really between democracy and art.

"To say that this is what art is and this isn't what art is, I don't know whether it's authoritarian or totalitarian, but it's definitely not democratic or at least from the ideals of what we consider to be democracy," he said.

Masso said the denial of art is the first step in dehumanizing others, which can lead to dismissal of a person's humanity. He said this is really a lack of love, and that it is artists who can help to show where the love is and where the love isn't, and that in and of itself is a function of the love of one's country.

"To be patriotic is not to just put your hand on your chest when the flag goes up and the anthem is sung, being patriotic is to acknowledge the things that are working, and work on the things not working," he said. "That means artists, because they've been put on earth to show us love, are the most sensitive to the things not showing love."

DCR lays out park plan for Leo Birmingham Parkway

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) met recently in a virtual format with about 60 residents to discuss the proposed plan for a redesign of the Leo Birmingham Parkway from Market Street to Parsons Street.

The proposal is to turn the Parkway into a real parkway, basically. The project scope is about a half-mile of the Leo M

Birmingham Parkway and would turn the four-lane street into a two-lane road with space for a pedestrian/cycling path on the right side. DCR Project Manager Jeff Parenti said they changed the size of the path from previous meetings from 10 feet wide to 12 feet based on resident feedback.

There would also be about 20 feet of greenspace between the cars and the pedestrian/bike path so as to keep residents safe as they traverse the parkway.

Parenti also said there is a plan starting to be formulated regarding a stretch of unused greenspace to the direct north of the parkway. He said right now the planning process for the park has not yet started but they are still taking input from residents on what they would like to see. They are proposing at least a bocce court for residents to use.

The plan would also change the Market Street/Birmingham Parkway intersection and put crosswalks on the west side to accommodate pedestrian traffic there. It would also put crosswalks on Leo Birmingham going northbound where currently there are none.

Discussion focused on the parking and the bocce court proposed for the parkland along the Leo Birmingham Parkway.

Resident and Birmingham Parkway Trust member Barbara Ross asked if a pollinator garden and some chess tables would be appropriate for the park in future planning sessions.

“I think that could definitely be considered during the park design phase of this project, and I think it’s a great idea,” Parenti said. “I was playing chess a little earlier today, so that’s right up my alley, as well as the pollinator garden. I think those are terrific ideas.”

Ross also advocated for a platform for some live music and also some other considerations for noise.

“From up there when we were cleaning it out last year, what we noticed was a tremendous amount of noise from the Mass Turnpike and I was wondering if there would be any way to develop a sound barrier along that area,” she said. “If we’re putting this in for people cycling and walking and a pool and all that, the noise level is pretty intense.”

Parenti said they would look into it.

Resident Salvatore Pinchera said he felt traffic could be negatively impacted by this project. He said he hoped the traffic that he felt this project would displace by losing two lanes in either direction wouldn’t affect the surrounding neighborhood, and pointed to another DCR initiative in Cambridge where they have closed Memorial Drive to vehicles every weekend.

“When you close Memorial Drive every weekend, you push more traffic on other roads and I hope you consider that every time you make something like this smaller that there’s an effect somewhere else,” he said.

Pinchera also asked the DCR to take into deep consideration the new developments being proposed and approved around Soldiers Field Road and how traffic would be affected.

Resident and Park Advisory Trust member Kirsten Ryan said she’s excited DCR has committed to a park in the area and is looking forward to meetings on the actual park design.

“Our group has been kind of brainstorming over the last couple of years and working with developers on some of the projects nearby through Impact Advisory Groups to get community benefits committed to future park activities and so forth,” she said. “The space is so large and extended there are going to be so many opportunities for different activities on different parts of it.”

Walk Boston’s Wendy Landman said she’s happy to see the park coming, and added that she wants to see parking be provided as on-street parking rather than a small lot cut out of the park.

“On-street parking actually makes pedestrians feel safer because there is a barrier between them and moving traffic and it also slows traffic down, making it feel like a street and not a high-speed roadway,” she said. “It also means pedestrians and cyclists would not have to cross a driveway, even though it’s only serving a small number of vehicles, anytime you have a curb cut across a sidewalk or a path, that makes it a little less safe for people walking or biking on that path.”
